

Rubric for Awareness Poster/Infographic

Self-assessment: highlight how you think you did, and submit this with your project.

	Minimally Meeting	Meeting	Exceeding
Information	Some information is accurate, but more is needed. Information may not be current. There is a link to a resource, but it is not relevant to the issue. Few tips/suggestions for solving the issue are included.	Information is accurate and relevant. Resources (website links, etc) to "learn more" about it, and tips/suggestions for solving the issue are included.	Introduction is accurate, relevant, and current. The resource links to "learn more" offer great additional information. Tips/suggestions for how to solve the problem/issue are included, and are creative and insightful.
Understanding of the Issue	The poster shows some understanding (may be unclear) of the issue and its impact on First Nations communities.	The poster shows a solid understanding of the issue and its impact on First Nations communities.	The poster shows a sophisticated understanding of the issue and its impact on First Nations communities.
Overall Presentation	Information on poster is not organized and is somewhat unclear. An image may be used, but it does not support the information.	Information on poster is organized and clear. Images and graphics are used to support the information. The poster is visually appealing.	Information on poster is very organized, clear, and engaging. The images and graphics used support the information. A graph/table is included. The poster is eye-catching and visually appealing.
Sources	One source is used for information, and may or may not be cited.	Several sources are used for information, and are cited and submitted (on the poster or in a separate document).	A variety of sources are used for information, and they are all cited and submitted (on the poster or in a separate document).